Registration for unregistered participants or their authorized representatives

Registration for eCCB is a two-step process: (1) logging in using your Login.gov credentials and (2) selecting a user role.

When you click "Sign in", you will see the Login.gov interface. If you've created a username and password in the past to access services like USAJOBS, TSA PreCheck and Global Entry, or the Small Business Administration's small business loans and disaster assistance, you already have a Login.gov account and can use it in eCCB. If you do not have a Login.gov account, eCCB will take you to where you can create one.

You will then need to register for eCCB. When registering for eCCB, you will need to input some important contact information and choose the correct user type from the drop-down menu. You will select your user role based on the way you are appearing before the CCB (for example, as a self-represented individual, an attorney, or an authorized representative of a business). You will then be able to log in on dockets.ccb.gov. For further detail regarding user roles, please see the Copyright Claims Board Handbook Chapter on eCCB.
