According to Ken Garner's In Session tonight book, Kershaw discovered the singer when Pete Lawrence of Cooking Vinyl brought into John Walters office a cassette 'of this woman he'd recorded at the Kerville Folk Festival in Texas,' recalls Andy. 'We listened to a bit of it, it was a sort of a female Woody Guthrie, and you could hear trucks rumbling by, train whistles in the distance, crickets chirping. Pete wanted to get her over here to re-record the numbers. Great idea, I said.

'Anyway, the tape burbled on, crickets chirping away; and I suddenly thought, look, if we're sitting here enjoying this so much will all this noise on the tape, why not just put it out as it is? It's just the right environment for these songs anyway.' And later, that's precisely what Cooking Vinyl did, releasing Michelle Shocked's Texas Camp Fire Tapes; yet only after they were convinced by the overwhelming response they got, when part of it was heard first as a Radio 1 session. Andy had believed in this idea to the extent of contracting in four of the numbers, which were first broadcast on 25 September 1986.

On his 11 April 1992 show, Andy was miffed that London Records hadn't sent him a copy of the latest Michelle Shocked album ("Arkansas Traveler"), despite the role he played in breaking the artist in the UK.
